Jaw Angle Implants

Every patient comes to you with different facial characteristics and desires for a particular appearance.

So we offer styles in numerous sizes that provide looks with a more defined angle, lateral projection or even a lowered jaw line.

The Vertical Lengthening Chin

Horizontal and 45° down projection

When patients present with a receding chin, a silicone implant is typically chosen to provide outward and somewhat lateral augmentation.

However, often overlooked, chins with a receding profile frequently have a weak vertical projection as well. In other words, an implant is needed to augment all three dimensions.

The Solution –
Implantech's Vertical Lengthening Chin implant (VLC).

The VLC features a 45° downward chin extension as well as a strong projection in the horizontal plane. The result is a more elongated face and triangular jawline-chin shape.

The Placement –
The VLC should be positioned along the lower edge of the anterior jawline to provide a 45° (forward and down) directional augmentation to the chin prominence. Check out this surgical technique guide.

The Result –

Conform™ Mandibular Angle
 Compared to the Lateral Mandibular Angle, puts more emphasis on the angle prominence and mandibular definition

Vertical Mandibular Angle
 Actually lowers the jaw angle and gradually increases lateral projection

Widening Mandibular Angle
 Ensures a wider, more well-defined jaw angle using a moderate amount of lateral projection

Lateral Mandibular Angle
 One of our two original jaw implants: Designed to increase lateral projection of the jaw angle

Whichever you choose, each of our jaw angles is designed to give your patient a more youthful, fuller and balanced look.
